

Cheating Hearts: When the Divorce Attorney Is the One Being Investigated

Empire Investigations Deploys Six-Agent Team in High-Stakes Infidelity Case

"Sue" came to Empire Investigations from out of state with growing suspicions about her husband — a divorce attorney whose behavior had become increasingly distant and erratic. He had lost interest in intimacy, was frequently working late, and his emotional disengagement had become impossible to ignore. The situation was made more complex by two critical factors: her husband had extensive knowledge of how private investigations work, and Sue was simultaneously managing a personal battle with cancer.

Empire Investigations accepted the case knowing the bar for operational security was exceptionally high. During the initial assessment, Sue disclosed that her husband — when hiring investigators himself — routinely used teams of no more than two. This intelligence immediately shaped Empire's strategy: outthink and out-resource the target. Within hours, a six-agent team was assembled and on a flight to Florida.

The investigation required creativity and precision. One female agent went undercover near a gated community, sunbathing while relaying real-time intelligence to the surveillance team. Empire deployed a professional surveillance van equipped for remote broadcast, maintaining continuous video coverage through the night. The target never left the condominium.

The following morning, the target was photographed and documented embracing and passionately kissing another woman in the condo doorway. Subsequent records research confirmed the woman was a client of his law firm. Empire presented the evidence, the case was negotiated out of court, and Sue received 100% of everything she asked for in the settlement — resolved within 48 hours.

"Working through the intricacies of an investigation is never the same for two cases, no matter how many years you do it. There's always a new angle, unique details, and new undercover methods to develop in order to be successful."

Going through a complex divorce can be one of the most trying times in your life. You don't know what the future holds — but you deserve the truth. Empire Investigations has the experience, the technology, and the operational discipline to get the proof you need, discreetly and decisively.
